

conclude that no prosecution is possible at this time. While there are a few hallmarks of truthfulness in her report, including some embarrassing admissions and present sense impressions, these indicators of honesty do not outweigh the many problems with her statements and the evidence or lack of evidence. Accordingly, I have serious reservations as to whether any crime occurred.

The case is being transferred to an open but inactive status. A continuing search of CODIS may identify a suspect at some point in the future based on DNA.
